

Ronda to Olvera

Cycling - 38km

This undulating route takes us through the hills and valleys to the north of Ronda and through a series of white villages dotted along the way. You will ride on mainly quiet country roads which wind their way through acres of olive groves and arable farmland. The villages lie low in the valleys or high on hill tops (so the route includes a couple of notable climbs) and they vary from the unusual to the impressive.

After passing through the small village of Arriate, we stop for refreshments in Setenil de las Bodegas. This village sits in the narrow gorge eroded by the Rio Trejo river and is famous for its cavehouses, built into the limestone rock walls of the river valley hundreds of years ago. Many of the cavehouses are still used today (with a few modifications) as shops, houses and bars.

Riding on through the small village of Torre Alhaquime, we then continue through the hills to finish at Olvera. This imposing hilltop town boasts a large Arab fortress and huge, twin-towered Renaissance church, visible for miles a round.
